PRINCETON HAS EASY

The defendive powers of the southerners was practically nil, with the result that the Orange and Black was on the stack almost throughout the contest. Most of the scoring was due to the individual work of the back field.

Princeton's team work was much improved, traces of a real interference being noticeable for the first time this fall.

S. Buker, who got his first tryout at quarterback, played a strong game.

The worst mistake I ever made was | the spring training trip, and all of down to a dish rag in the first hot days, especially if he has been working hard to take off weight and hasn't hardened up yet. Well, that day was that kind, only worse. There wasn't a breath of air, and the mountain of slag and cinders around the field caught all the heat and sent it back at us with interest. It came down to the ninth inning and we had a run to the good, although I don't remember how we got it. The first man up for Birmingham soused the ball past me for two bases, and the chasing of it didn't help me any. The next drew a base on balls and the next one hit a fly far out over my head. I gave her a chase and caught her out near the fence. I saw the runner, going from second to third on the catch and I out loose as hard as I could throw. I knew it was bad baseball to throw to third, or to throw at all, but I threw and the runner was so surprised he slowed up and I caught him five feet from the bag standing up.

When I came in after the game ended Chance landed on me all sprawled out in a bunch, wanting to know where I learned the game, whether I wanted to throw my arm out and several other things. I said: "Til tell you, Frank. I figured it this way: If I caught him it would thought I meant to foul out to keep inning." He let me win the argument, which is the only one I've won with the made was down south one spring. SALT LAKE FAN WAS WOOD'S SCHOOLMATE

Premier Twirler Was Leader Among Playmates and Always Pitched.

G. W. Mayol of The Tribune staff was schoolmate of Joe Wood, the sensational pitcher of the Boston team, and recalls the very beginning of the star's career as follows:

Joseph Wood, more familiarly known as "Smoky" Joe Wood, the star pitcher for the Red Sox, started his career as a baseball pitcher in the little mining camp of Ouray, Colo, a town with a population of less than 1500 people. At that time

Cole, a town with a population of less than 1500 people. At that time he was attending the graded school in Ouray and was only a lad of fifteen years of age, which was about eight years age, making him at the present time less than 23 years old. The one and only school in the town was a combination of high school and graded school, and as there was not a very large attendance it was quite a difficult task for the sport loving pupils to gather together enough ball players for two teams, but nevertheless, it was managed in some way and there were many a ficreely fought game played, after the dismissal of school, in the old lumber yard.

Joe was pretty much of a leader nmong the graded school pupils and, of course, when it came to buil playing, he, being chosen captain of one team would always play what position suited his fancy, and it was generally pitcher. During vacation time, from June 1 to Septamber 1, the boys would all gather on the ball grounds Sunday afternoons, and after making an equal division of the men present, baneball would be the entire afternoon's enloyment. As usual, Joe would pitch for one team and it was ithen that a number of the balf fans of the town began to take quite an interest in him. It could readily be seen by his companions, as well as the eider heads in the town, that he was the making of a good man in the baseball world from the case he took in placing a swift ball over the plate, and also from the curves he pitched as a result of his peculiar "twist of the wrist" delivery.

A city ball team was then organized, and although Joe was signed up with the team, he was placed on the bench because of his age, and was only called upon when it was absolutely necessary.

It was shortly after this that the Wood family left Ouray for Chicago, where it was his father's intention to continue with his law practice.

Joe is also an expert pool and billiard player and probably would have been classed as a professional and playing the best of them now if he had not taken up baseball instead. At the

CORNELL WINS GAME: PLAYING IS RAGGED

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Cornell won its second game of football this season today, defeating the University of New York, 14 to 4. Cornell showed some improvement, but the playing of the eleven was ragged in the first half, in which the New York collegians scored, taking the ball from their own 20-yard line to the goal on forward passes.
